Related subject: The Elms development which currently falls within the Wraxall and Failand parish.

I strongly oppose the proposal to move the Elms area from its current parish to within a Nailsea ward. I have lived in the Elms area since 1996 and border the rural area of the W & F parish. I see no justification for moving the area to the Nailsea ward. I have more community identity with the parish than Nailsea which is an urban area. I do not support the LGBCE considerations for redefining the parish boundary which in my view are weak and will reduce the income for the W & F parish council. Nailsea is already expanding fast with new development underway and planned and will benefit immensely from such. The case for removing some 400 homes from the Elms from within the rural boundary of W & F is therefore not made in my view and would represent a retrograde step for the Elms community and the parish.
