How is it justified that because the road infrastructure connecting the Elms to Nailsea makes the Elms more reflecting of the urban character when if you look north and East and south we are virtually surrounded by fields (wirh footpaths) making it more rural and better connected to Wraxall and Failand. You may have visited the Elms and come up with your view but i am not aware of any consultation with the people who live, in fact previous consultations have shown majority of residents do not want change. Please respect the local democracy and avoid influence of building contractors who want to destroy the fields between Nailsea and Wraxall
