Comment text:

As a resident of the Elms I strongly appose the proposed Ward Boundary change to move the Elms area of Wraxall and Failand into a Nailsea Ward.
The residents overwhelmingly recently voted for the Elms not come under Nailsea town council remit (90% of residents) for very good reasons that were deemed strong enough to remain within the Wraxall Failand parish.
We are very much part of a rural community, the main reason we moved here. Wraxall and Failand parish councillors have our best rural interest at heart and I would be genuinely worried that if taken over by Nailsea ward our best interests would not be served, especially on any future building plans.
We already have a very clear boundary line being lodge lane. This has historic significance and is very clear. No ambiguity for anyone on that question.
We currently have two Wraxall councillors representing us and if moved to Nailsea ward would be diluted to one. Tells a very clear story to where emphasis would lie going forward.
I strongly oppose these proposed changes and pretty annoyed that once again we Elms residents are having to challenge this same topic again having done so very recently.
