Having read the proposed change in ward boundary involving the removal of The Elms from the Long Ashton / Wraxall Ward to Nailsea, I'm not only disappointed but bewildered as to "why"? Despite the report submitted it appears this is down to the opinion of one individual from Nailsea Town Council. There appears to be no account regarding the views of the residents of The Elms or Wraxall itself. The Elms and the people who live there are part of a wider disparate rural community. They are integral to what Wraxall is. We not only have strong representation on the Parish Council and other organisations within the Ward but also a healthy engagement on rural matters that affect the countryside. If The Elms is removed and placed under Nailsea then all that is lost. We already have a clear boundary that separate The Elms from Nailsea - that being Lodge Lane. Why does this have to change, especially when there has been no significant change in housing historically and there is none planned? I hope I speak for all in Wraxall and the Long Ashton Ward and ask that the Local Government Boundary Commission reconsider its proposal based on the above and any other evidence it may not have been party to when the proposal was submitted.
