At present, what ever the number of wards, there are differing needs in each ward and this will not change proposing more wards. How to find a common link between each ward, whilst establishing and acknowledging the differences between the needs of individual wards should be the focus. Most individuals focus on their particular needs not the big picture and therefore tunnel vision determines the comments of individuals. This will inevitably have an impact on the outcome of any democratic voice. I propose that Basildon Council give some lead and guidance in this. It is likely that politics etc, will inevitably play a significant part what ever the outcome of the proposal.
