Firstly how is that the only boundaries that are being moved are those that the parties other than Labour have made gains in over recent elections. Secondly if boundaries are being moved then why is there no proposal to incorporate the rest of Great Ashby into Stevenage and away from NHDC. Surely this is a priority as all the building work there is complete, and I was reliable informed that that was always the deal between the two councils. Thirdly when the new housing development starts to gain residents on the other side of Gresley Way who's ward will they be under? Chells Manor probably not! More likely East Herts District council. This will give us a situation where 3 different councils will be in charge of Stevenage residents. This is a joke and needs addressing before any other proposals are even considered.
