I believe that Woodley has two MP's representing its constituents. In Loddon Ward we are classed as East Reading and lumped in with Reading. Reading East has a completely different demographic to Woodley and I believe is not representative of the inhabitants of Woodley. The result of this is that because of the population of East Reading is far greater than Woodley they will be more that likely determine the MP chosen through the ballot box. Woodley also comes under Wokingham Borough and East Reading of Course comes under Reading Council. This is a nonsense. To be truly representative Woodley must be united under one MP within wards that are controlled by Wokingham Borough Council.
