Glenfields is a town in all but name and comprises quite defined blocks and community identities reflecting in the large the different expansions of the village over time. It has not been steady growth but a series of surges and as such has created very real communities of often different demographics. The original village of Glenfield was Stamford Street, Main Street and Station Road, a tightly contained area largely comprising our conservation area. As Stamford Street was later extended to Leicester City as Dominion Road a large area was developed on and to the south of this road, again of a distinct character reflecting the time when it was constructed and very different from the old area. Subsequently the large Calverley Estate was developed to the north of Dominion Road infilling as far as the old Parish of Glenfield Frith which was joined to Glenfield to form Glenfields in 1901. There is also the area on and around Gynsills Lane leaving the village northwards towards Charnwood and there is the Brantings Estate isolated to the west of the rest of the village the other side of the Rothley Brook corridor and effectively if not actually aligned to Groby in the next district. 30 years ago The Elm Tree Estate was added south of the old village as Main Street was extended towards Muxloe as Kirby Road. Recently south of that also off Kirby Road a further 250 houses have been added. Splitting the village roughly East and West whilst not disturbing these different neighbourhoods it leaves the number of electors per ward broadly the same. I made an earlier submission but now with the benefit of more voter numbers predictions I am amending and expanding my suggestions. The soft option now that I have seen projected figures would be to just take polling stations and splitting the village DM, DN and DO and DJ, DK and DL. This would not reflect the different communities within the village. A fairly simple process achieving the same result could reflect the communities. By putting the Gynsill Lane area together with Glenfield Frith, the Calverley Estate and the easterly old estate south of Dominion Road the number for one ward would come out correct. This leaves the old village intact to be linked with the western outpost of the Brantings and the parcels of newer developments to the south, off Kirby Road, with broadly the same electorate as the first ward to the east. These are indicated on the attached map I have drawn and coincidentally are largely contained within either streams or public footpaths as boundaries I commend them to you. I would propose the eastern ward be called Glenfrith ward to reflect in abbreviated form the old Parish contained within it. Glenfield Frith Road runs right through the centre of this ward. The Western ward to be named Ellis ward to reflect the family who were early benefactors to the village and we have Ellis Park in the centre of this ward. I think these wards are easily achieved, have natural boundaries in the main, and keep the identifiable communities intact. They would reflect the two historic parishes which merged and in as far as is possible within Glenfields, each ward would have sections of the range of demographics and to an extent a mix of likely political persuasions. My map of Glenfield has yellow to show amenity areas and blue the conservation area but a grey wash to show my suggested Glenfrith Ward and white to show the suggested Ellis Ward MUXLOE & FOREST. I would also like to make some observations about the neighbouring parishes of Kirby Muxloe and Leicester Forest East. We are all part of the same parliamentary ward so I am familiar with those areas. Muxloe number of voters is on the small side for two councillors and LFE on the small side for 3 councillors which are the resent situations. It strikes me there is an obvious divide and that if all of LFE north of the A47 trunk road was transferred into Muxloe, that ward would come up to the correct sort of numbers and LFE if reduced to two councillors would also be nearer to the average.

Proposed Wards - Glenfields

I earlier submitted ideas for the new warding but now with the benefit of more evidence by way of actual predicted voter numbers I wish to update my submission.

Glenfields is a town in all but name and comprises quite defined blocks and community identities reflecting in the large, the different expansions of the village over time. It has not been steady growth but a series of surges and as such has created very real communities of often different demographics

The original village of Glenfield was Stamford Street, Main Street and Station Road, a tightly contained area largely comprising our conservation area.

As Stamford Street was later extended to Leicester City as Dominion Road a large area was developed on and to the south of this road, again of a distinct character reflecting the time when it was constructed and very different from the old area.

Subsequently the large Calverley Estate was developed to the north of Dominion Road infilling as far as the old Parish of Glenfield Frith which was joined to Glenfield to form Glenfields in 1901.

There is also the area on and around Gynsills Lane leaving the village northwards towards Charnwood and there is the Brantings Estate isolated to the west of the rest of the village the other side of the Rothley Brook corridor and effectively if not actually aligned to Groby in the next district.

30 years ago The Elm Tree Estate was added south of the old village as Main Street was extended towards Muxloe as Kirby Road. Recently further south beyond that and also off Kirby Road a further 250 houses have been added.

Splitting the village roughly East and West whilst not disturbing these different neighbourhoods it leaves the number of electors per ward broadly the same.

The soft option now that I have seen projected figures would be to just take polling stations and splitting the village DM, DN and DO and DJ, DK and DL. This would not reflect the different communities within the village and still leave something of an imbalance.

A fairly simple process achieving at least the same but I think a better numeric result could properly reflect the communities. By putting the Gynsill Lane area together with Glenfield Frith, the Calverley Estate and the easterly old estate south of Dominion Road the number for this ward would come out broadly correct.

This leaves the old village intact to be linked with the western outpost of the Brantings and the parcels of newer developments to the south, off Kirby Road, with broadly the same electorate as the first ward to the east.

These are indicated on the attached map I have drawn and coincidentally are largely contained within either streams or public footpaths as boundaries

I commend them to you.

I would propose the eastern ward be called Glenfrith ward to reflect in abbreviated form the old Parish contained within it. Glenfield Frith Road runs right through the centre of this ward.

The Western ward to be named Ellis ward to reflect the family who were early benefactors to the village and we have Ellis Park in the centre of this ward.

I think these wards are easily achieved, have natural boundaries in the main, and keep the identifiable communities intact. They would reflect the two historic parishes which merged and, in as far as is possible within Glenfields, each ward would have sections of the range of demographics and to an extent a mix of likely political persuasions.

My map of Glenfield has yellow to show amenity areas and blue the conservation area but a grey wash to show my suggested Glenfrith Ward and white to show the suggested Ellis Ward

MUXLOE & FOREST

I would also like to make some observations about the neighbouring parishes of Kirby Muxloe and Leicester Forest East. We are all part of the same parliamentary ward so I am familiar with those areas.

Muxloe number of voters is on the small side for two councillors and LFE on the small side for 3 councillors which are the present situations.

It strikes me there is an obvious divide and that if all of LFE north of the A47 trunk road was transferred into Muxloe, that ward would come up to the correct sort of numbers and LFE if then reduced to two councillors would also be nearer to the average.
