

Buckinghamshire Council

Personal Details:

[REDACTED]	[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]	[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]	[REDACTED]

Organisation Name:

Comment text:

The design of the electoral areas seems to be based on a numerical principle of three councillors representing approximately eight thousand of the population. The design of the geographical area is then such that it appears like a child's puzzle. Ridgeway East is just such a convoluted long thin type of electoral area. A more intelligent design with local areas linked within a logical designed geographical area. There may well be political chicanery in the design of the electoral areas as well. Party politics should be excluded from the design of electoral districts. If it means some areas having more councillors and other areas less then that is how it should be. A reduction in the overall count of councillors would be very beneficial as well.

Uploaded Documents:

None Uploaded