As per <https://fivethirtyeight.com/features/how-the-house-got-stuck-at-435-seats/> apparently parliaments generally have around the cube root of the population in seats. Taking the population from <https://www.buckinghamshire.gov.uk/your-council/corporate-plans-and-priorities/corporate-plan/corporate-plan-2020-2023/buckinghamshire-numbers/> that would give a figure of ~81.7 for Buckinghamshire. If there are 49 divisions then 98 councillors would fit that rule fairly well but also be a little high in my opinion - but that's probably the easiest and cheapest fix compared to changing the number of divisions.
