There is no reason for Buckinghamshire to have a council which is significantly different in size to other similar counties. Looking at E.g. Oxfordshire, Hertfordshire and Northamptonshire a figure of around 50-60 councillors would seem ample. There are massive savings to be made by substantially changing the size of the council which residents will be grateful for. Please learn from the outcome of the Chesham & Amersham by-election. Residents do not feel listened to. They feel long established structures are self serving and out of touch. A slimmed down modernised and more nimble council is what we need. Bucks is not a large county or metropolitan area. There is no way it needs more representatives than the Welsh Senedd or Scottish assembly!
