Councillor numbers are recommended to be 60, with a population of just less than 150,000. Why not take the opportunity to reduce the number of councillors, as has happened in many places elsewhere? For example, the Stoke on Trent City Council, formerly 60 councillors, was reduced to just 43 a few years ago, yet Stoke has 260,000 people. The LGBCE does not seem to have a consistent policy on councillor numbers v population. I wonder why this is?
