Considering the effort made to form an independent identity for Apley it seems a backwards step to effectively undo this by combining Apley and Leegomery into one. There is a natural divide between the two areas in terms of residential properties and the merging could impact house prices. It would end up even more confusing to try and revert back to being called leegomery and residents in Apley are unlikely to vote in support of change in postal address. Saying all this I've not seen anything communicated to residents on why you do want to merge the areas or the benefits you believe it would bring.
