

This is so unnecessary, we should be focusing on making our city better, not arguing what certain areas are called and where exactly their boundaries are. We need better infrastructure, better and much cheaper public transport... Crime rate needs to be reduced. The amount of litter is disgusting and things aren't being maintained properly. If only we could get experts in various different fields together to come up with short and long term plans to properly fix issues and then get local businesses and communities involved. I know it's not that easy, but so far I've seen a lot of money being thrown at patching things temporarily or just changing what is already working.
