You are splitting all the areas of North, South and East Moulsecoomb and Bates Estate. As these areas have more in common with each other than Stanmer and Coldean, it remains to be seen if this is workable, as much of the community development in the area reaches across the board. Will some parts of Moulsecoomb end up short changed and will the needs of the areas be the same or different, once you start messing around with boundaries for wards. Will everyone's voices be heard within the new area, or will the long established Stanmer area push the agenda, or visa versa? The demographics are changing, but social needs continue across all areas, so an equal balance needs to be maintained. Mixing up the demographics may have unforeseen outcomes for good or bad. Not sure which way this will pan out.
