We are very surprised at this proposal off splitting Patcham in half. Patcham was originally built as a separate estate. Looking at Patcham geographically, it is obviously an estate as a whole. It cannot be fragmentated. How can the boundary cut right across the Patcham Clock Tower? It would be ludicrous to split Patcham up. Besides Westdene is on the other side of the main London Road so how can Patcham be joined up with Westdene? It will affect the school catchment issues and various other things. I know this is political as there will be other attempts to build on the nature reserve, etc. The whole idea is ridiculous.
