I live in Patcham, Mackie Avenue and I would like to object to the further draft proposal to split Patcham in two with these new ideas. How devisive! Mackie Avenue isits in deepest Patcham and is proposed to be in a a new named area, Hollingbury and Carden This bears no meaning to where I live. The name Carden only relates to the name of a road and little else. I get looking at a flat map from a sky view, it looks all nice, but please visit us and see that the only access to Mackie Avenue and the Mackie estate is through the Patcham ward, so what's the idea? I liken this to a large univerty in one town opeining up a new campus, but in another town. The only thing in common is the name on the tin. Ther is no meaningful link. It would be mindless to suggest that it is better to split Patcham in two and suggest that this would be a good thing. Please leave Patcham as it is, a community acting together. Please do not impose this Frankenstein concept of putting a half of one community together with one whole another community. They have different needs and cannot realistically or meaningfully be served by one councillor. Patcham should be kept as Patcham and as one whole community. I would feel exiled from a community that I have always lived in and that really hurts.
