The Patcham and Hollingbury proposed boundary divide seems badly thought out possibly by individuals that do not know the area. I live on the mackie road estate, at the very start, and despite mine and hundreds of other children going to the Patcham schools, this is going to be classed as Hollingbury? The Mackie estate is a closed off area at the heart of Patcham, as is the ladies mile pub at the bottom. Surely Carden primary school and Asda are Hollingbury? I really hope this is thought through again. I would hope that individuals making the decisions would have a drive around the area rather than looking at a map.....it might therefore make more sense. I love a 1 minute walk from Patcham library, Patcham Methodist church and all the schools, yet we are still being put into the different area. I really hope you consider Mackie road and the roads coming off of it to be changed to Patcham. It just makes sense. Thank you.
