Comment text:

I, as a resident of Patcham fully object to Patcham being absorbed into neighboring suburbs. Patcham has had a long-standing history, having developed separately from Brighton itself since the medieval ages. In fact it once encompassed neighboring suburbs, until modern developments separated the areas. By absorbing Patcham into Westdene and Hollingbury, the council ends the 8 centuries of Patcham's history, and destroys many cultural aspects of the history of Brighton as a whole.
