Firstly as you will be aware, Ingleby barwick was a farmstead within the boundaries of Thornaby, it has now and is still developing into a town in it's own right, it is boarded by bassleton beck / low lane & the river leven and the river tees. I dont see how that could possibly be argued. I would be more concerned why teesside is losing its identity, on Queen Elizabeth way the south side is known as North Yorkshire as the river tees is the boundary of North Yorkshire, the North is now stating you're entering County Durham, this is complete nonsense not one person from TEESSIDE would say their lived in county durham, the county durham boundary is north of billingham and West of Hartlepool. This sign showed up maybe 2 years ago, I have no idea who could possibly argue that stockton with a post code of TS could possibly be in county durham DH, I would suggest someone needs to Google durham post code map.
