Comment text:

As serving District Councillor for the current Pinvin Ward and retired County Councillor for this area from 1981-2021 I strongly support the proposal to keep the cluster of parishes together around the old airfield at Throckmorton as Pinvin Ward unchanged. Over many years the five parishes have worked together positively - foot and mouth burials on the airfield, against an asylum centre being unsuitably located on the airfield, the need for a bypass for the narrow street through Wyre Piddle (now built), the need for a major new link road and railway bridge access into Pershore (to be completed later this year). Each parish is a distinct community with its own differing character and problems but we work together well in the overall interests of the area. The next mutual challenge, to be made public this June, is to influence proposals for a new town of 5,000 homes to be centred on the airfield and to do our best to retain the distinctiveness of the surrounding ring of small villages.
