Comment text:

I am a resident of Southborough. Combining southborough and bidborough into one region does not represent the differences in population that exist in those places. Southborough is a semi-urban area, ultimately an extension of Tunbridge Wells, with a strong working class community in places and a population relying on local infrastructure heavily to run day to day life. Bidborough is in parts a rural village, in other parts affluent housing. It has a fundamentally different character to that of Southborough. The Parish and the Ward boundaries reflect this reality. It would be preferable for Southborough instead, if needed to expand for population purposes, to cover areas to the south or east with which there is a far more natural alignment.
