Shiremoor being all in one ward makes sense with the rural bits at the top in a different ward. I used to live in Chirton and I think having carton with percy main makes more sense than having it with Preston Village or crossing the coast road. I think that the percy main and meadowell estates are one continuous block. The riverside division which we have at the moment is far too big the Chirton and percy main seat makes much more sense. I think on the other areas in North Shields the main roads being used as boundarys make sense. Especially with the linskill centre and gunner pub moving into Tynemouth Ward. I dont know much about the Wallsend area but on a map it seems to make sense, the two main towns of Whitley Bay and Wallsend are the only two that are split across 2 wards, this makes sense because the monkseaton seat at the moment monkseaton isn't a big enough place to split in two
