Gateshead has too many councilors per voting population and they should be cut from 66 to 40, in line with other areas. Gateshead has one of the highest number of councillors to population in the country. Keeping this number of councillors is a waste of public money and considerable savings could be made.

Many of the functions of the council are now being done by volunteers, but the number has remained the same for 40 years eg library services, planting up flower beds.
