There are far too many councillors in Gateshead. A town of this size does not need anywhere near as many councillors as it has. Having attended council cabinet meetings and had contact with councillors in different capacities it is clear that, in its current format, the council is inefficient and stuck in its ways. A reduction in councillors is urgently needed, and will help the financial predicament the council now finds itself in. To retain the current number of councillors while closing facilities is immoral and unnecessary.
