Related subject: WARLEY WARD

I live in Warley Town and when i consider the current make-up of the Warley Ward there are parts of the ward with which Warley Town has little in common. Warley Town is a small community, with a rural feel yet is 'teamed up' with areas of dense housing/population and the resulting needs of each neighbourhood are very very different. It would seem much more appropriate to align Warley Town to areas like Luddenden Mount Tabor and Wainstalls as these areas have so much more in common (ie rural, small community feel). As a result the 'job' of the local Councillor could be so much more effective as it's likely there will be much more alignment/commonality in the needs of the residents/communities they represent and the 'things' they are asked to focus on - vs. what currently feels like a very broad and diverse range of needs from very different community areas
