I wish to record my extreme dissatisfaction with the latest proposal by the Boundary Commission to divide the community of Oxshott having its own high street, shops, medical centre, schools and railway station, by arbitrarily splitting the village in half with the creation of a new boundary along the A244. The proposal does not respect and reflect community identity and would create an artificial division and loss of identity for the residents of Oxshott village for which there can be no justification. The existing boundaries should be retained to allow the whole of Oxshott to remain a part of the Hinchley Wood, Claygate and Oxshott division.
