By dividing Oxshott this divides a well formed community of approximately 5,000, it has its own high street, businesses - by splitting would mean some parts not being informed of ward intentions thereby affecting the whole area detrimentally. Removing a town name that has been around for centuries seems absurd creating a cost for the changing of all road signs, place names, business addresses and individual residences and associations, paid for by the local taxes, which surely can go to better use elsewhere in the county. There is no reason for this proposal except political - its about time residents are listened to.
