Please do not divide Oxshott down the A244, and then remove the name of the village from future wards!. The A244 needs a lot of attention, but it is still the High Street in a bustling and busy centre, which has grown even more popular and community-minded in the last few years. Cutting it in half would be damaging to residents and businesses, would make amenity management more complicated and difficult, would create unnecessary and damaging divisions over an area that has fought to keep its identity whole, even as that identity changes. The village and the road through it deserve to be protected and cared for. If you create an unnatural division by using this road, you will be deliberately undermining the sense of cohesion that Oxshott has managed to create - despite the traffic on that road being so difficult to manage.

The name Oxshott should be kept as a matter of course - it is ancient, but even more than that, it is a village / town that is growing in status and relevance. Its name should be kept alive in all references to matters that affect it - otherwise people will not realise what any actions will do to their area, and references to areas will lose their resonance with those who live there.
