The A244 is a difficult road for many reasons; but it is the centre of Oxshott. Using it to divide the village is wrong and unnecessary. It would be like putting a fence through the middle of a house rather than round the garden. Oxshott's amenities and identity need help to protect them from the growing traffic throughput on the road, but making it part of two separate wards would over-complicate things and generate division. The name of Oxshott needs to be kept in any wards that affect the village. Losing it would be like suggesting that it doesn't count, or that it has no importance or that it doesn't matter - but it does, very much, to the people who live there.
