Please could you explain to me how the Abingdon North division has a current electorate of 8844 and the proposed electorate is also 8844. With all the new houses going up in that area then surely this would increase. Is this a mistake by someone - if so how much of the other data is incorrect? I totally agree with reviewing the divisions so that numbers are roughly equally. I personally would like to see all divisions having only one elected councillor rather than two, eg, Thame and Chinnor as just one example. Why not have a Thame North and South - just like Abingdon..
