To whom it may concern,

I think the proposal of 55 divisions, each with a councillor, is way over the top. But then I don't see a need for councillors at all, as they are ineffective in achieving anything and are an unnecessary cost.

I speak as someone with 24 years' experience of working in local government, during which I don't recall one action by a councillor that did anything for the people they are supposed to represent.

Councils run on paid employees administering government policy. I don't believe councillors at county level and, for that matter, parish level are needed.

The fewer, the better in my view.
