In these times of reduced finances and existing difficulties I find it ludicrous that this exercise is taking place at all. It would be interesting to know what the cost of this will be to residents and taxpayers. I can see absolute benefit of my area now becoming part of Lyndon but I can very much see a detrimental effect on my property prices and delivery of services if this happens.

Based purely on the potential monetary consequences of this potential undertaken I therefore have to object. Leave it as it is. The old adage of "If it isn't broken, don't fix it" comes very much to the fore. I also can't help but wonder what political forces are motivating this potential change.
