Comment text:

Chelmsley wood, smiths wood, castle vale, marston green used to be part of birrmingham. It was never explained to solihull residents why these areas were added to solihull. Therefore this led to speculation and conclusion that it was likely due to the council/governments massaging of figures to make crime stats look better. Sadly there is now discussion around closing solihull police station at a time that the population has massively increased, with increasingly significantly different cultural extremes and native silhillians feeling more unsafe and insecure than at and previous time in history. Alas although I spend over £3k in council tax I fear theses comments are a lip service exercise and the council/government will continue to plough through with whatever agenda suits them at the time rather than truly listen to residents views.
