Good afternoon,

I have lived in Scarborough all my life and now live in East Ayton. I am writing to support the draft proposals the commission has come up with for Ayton. I think given the population constraints that the commission is working with it is acceptable to split East and West Ayton and move East Ayton into a division with Irton, Seamer and Crossgates as these villages all have similar characteristics.

I would however like to make a suggestion to the commission's plans for Cayton. I know the area well having lived in Scarborough all my life and think that the areas currently being moved from Eastfield to Cayton do not really make sense. They are the heart of Eastfield's community and so it would make it hard for a councillors to effectively represent such differing communities with such different needs. Middle Deepdale is a new estate being built north of Eastfield which already has planning permission and people have started to move in to the homes which have been built already. This will have totally different character to Eastfield and will not form part of the community as the roads south of the Eastway do. I propose the commission instead move roads north of Crossdale Way into Cayton and Osgodby as they will be well connected by Priory Place to allow Eastfield's integrity to be maintained intact. Given the level of deprivation and need that some of the community in Eastfield experiences if that were diluted by being split in two there is a risk that residents would not get the representation and support from councillors that they need if the councillor is having to represent such diverse communities.

I would like my details to be kept private please.
